

Best Practices for Integrating Your Oral History Collections in Exhibitions and Online

Date: January 14 , 2021 (Storm date: January 21)

Location: Bedeque Community Room, PEI

Duration: 1 day

Presenters: Megan Richardson, Director (Virtual Museum of Canada)
Matthew McRae, Executive Director (PEI Museum and Heritage Foundation)
Johanne Vigneault, Executive Director (CMA-PEI)

Sharing and using their collection to educate, to question and to entertain their visitors is another main function of the museums. Oral history collections can provide ways to become a more participatory museum and to encourage communications among visitors. This workshop will point out different ways oral history elements can enhance exhibitions (physical and virtual); can be used on websites and social media pages along with tricks on identifying related collection artefacts.

"My Dad has a way of making a long story even longer."

Participants to the workshop will:

- Get advice on creating blogs and virtual tools
- See examples on how oral history can be used in the virtual world
- Share observations on customers' use and reaction to oral history components
- Learn the concepts of participatory museum
